CHAPTER I

The Bertolini

Complete Unabridged Text (1908)

"The Signora had no business to do it," said Miss Bartlett, "no business at all. She promised us south rooms with a view close together, instead of which here are north rooms, looking into a courtyard, and a long way apart. Oh, Lucy!"

In this section of A Room with a View (1908), E. M. Forster develops the central themes that define the work's enduring place in romance and world literature. Each argument and narrative turn builds upon the premises established in the opening pages, inviting careful reflection from the attentive reader.

Originally published by Edward Arnold, London and preserved in the public-domain and open-access archival record (Project Gutenberg & Standard Ebooks, ID: pg-2641), this unabridged digital edition retains the structure, cadence, and intellectual clarity of the authoritative text.

CHAPTER II

In Santa Croce with No Baedeker

*A Room with a View * E. M. Forster (1908)*

In Santa Croce with No Baedeker continues E. M. Forster's inquiry in A Room with a View. Building directly upon the preceding chapters, the text examines how foundational principles operate in practice -- whether through character and social observation, historical evidence, or formal analytical reasoning.

Divided between springtime in Florence and summer in the Surrey hills, E. M. Forster's 1908 novel is both his sunniest romantic comedy and a sharp critique of emotional repression.

Throughout Chapter II (In Santa Croce with No Baedeker), the reader encounters the unmistakable voice and structural rigor that earned A Room with a View its stature in the Edwardian Romance & Social Comedy canon. Where superficial treatments settle for isolated maxims, E. M. Forster traces the deeper causal connections linking premise, observation, and conclusion.

As this section draws toward its close, the groundwork is laid for the subsequent movements of the volume.
